FinTech4Good to bring together Blockchain leaders at New York digital forum

FinTech4Good is among the four organisers of what will be the first digital assets investor forum in New York.

The event, called the 2018 Digital Assets Investment Forum (DAIF), will bring over 200 blockchain leaders together with investors on January 16. Details here.

FinTech4Good is collaborating on the event with Alternative Assets, Asia Finance Association, and Wall Street Blockchain Alliance and describes itself as a global FinTech (financial technology) and Blockchain "acceleration network".

"We hope this forum will connect digital asset gurus, technology pioneers and blockchain investors, to share the most disruptive solutions and shape the future of digital assets," said Xiaochen Zhang, President of FinTech4Good.

"Many executives are traveling thousands of miles from Asia, Europe, South America and Oceania to the Digital Asset Investment Forum."

FinTech4Good works with start-ups, industrial leaders, NGOs and investors to develop and implement FinTech and Blockchain solutions for a 'better world'.

Blockchain is one of the hottest business and investment topics around and came to prominence as the technology, which underpins and supports cryptocurrencies, like bitcoin.

Major institutions are said to now be coming round to the potential of the blockchain phenomenon, and are investing heavily to see how it can best be deployed.

Put simply, blockchains are a real-time platform of records stored in a peer-to-peer fashion, independent from any central authority.

It is said to be a technology that will revolute many systems we encounter in everyday.
