Canyon Resources study shows existing rail can move bauxite

Canyon Resources Ltd (ASX:CAY) has completed an initial independent assessment of the existing Camrail rail network located adjacent to the Minim Martap bauxite project in Cameroon.

Positively, it has been concluded that the existing rail line from Minim Martap to Cameroon's largest city Douala has the capacity to transport commercial tonnages of bauxite.

An assessment was also carried out on the proposed route and ground conditions for the proposed rail extension to the Kribi Deep Water Port located south of Douala.

Canyon's managing director Phillip Gallagher said: "A logistics solution is a crucial component of the Minim Martap Bauxite Project and we are pleased with the very positive feedback from this assessment of the existing rail infrastructure, in particular, that ongoing maintenance and upgrade works are underway.

"The study confirmed our belief that the existing rail line is in good condition and has the capacity to transport bauxite from Minim Martap to the Kribi Port via the future rail link.

Minim Martap one of world's highest grade deposits

"Canyon has demonstrated the Minim Martap Project is very large and one of the highest grade bauxite deposits globally, confirmed by our recently-announced very high-grade Inferred Resource of 250.9 million tonnes at 50.8% Al₂O₃ (total) and 1.9% SiO₂.

"Importantly, we have now confirmed the rail line is accessible and operational and when the rail extension is completed, it will provide access to the deepwater port that we can utilise to transport bauxite to customers.

"This is a key, positive differential to many other West African bauxite projects."
