

Location of the high-grade Querosene and Dona Maria resources along the Jurena fault

Two distinct styles of primary gold mineralisation are apparent:

Discrete steeply dipping generally narrow quartz veins with minor sulphides and high-grade gold both as free gold and associated with sulphide alteration and vein selvages; and

Zones of sheeted quartz veins, stockworks and minor breccias, which contain 3-5% sulphides.

Proposed work to increase confidence and grow resources

Only 24% and 34% of the resources at Querosene and Dona Maria respectively are in the indicated category.

The main objective of the initial exploration will be to convert ounces from inferred to indicated in order to enable more detailed economic studies to occur.

The company plans to:

Increase confidence in the resources at shallow depths with additional drill holes in the near-surface, especially below the artisanal pits;

Generate accurate (survey) 3D surfaces of the base of current artisanal working, which don't currently exist; and

Carry out additional specific gravity (SG) measurements.
