Bass recently received the water treatment skid required to start the first in-field trials using water injection delivered to site at its Tangai Sukananti onshore Indonesian oil fields.

Pre-trial work conducted by Bass has pointed to a potential increase in output and ultimate recoveries of around 10% per well.

The company's in-field trials are being supported by its memorandum of understanding (MoU) with the Bandung Institute of Technology in Indonesia to trial low-salinity water injection (LSWI) at Bass' producing Tangai oil field in South Sumatra.

The purpose of the MoU is to facilitate collaboration on research to implement "smart", low-salinity water-flooding systems for enhanced oil recovery specific to onshore Indonesian fields.

Bass and the university expect to start the pilot water injection project in January next year, subject to positive first field trial results as well as approval by Indonesia's state-owned oil and gas corporation PT Pertamina.
