PolarX Ltd enjoying an 'embarrassment of riches' at its Alaska Range project

PolarX Ltd (ASX:PXX) managing director Frazer Tabeart caught up with Proactive London's Andrew Scott for a chat while at Mines and Money 2018.

He says the company's made significant progress on its Alaska Range Project this year, considerably enhancing the prospectivity of the project to host major porphyry copper-gold systems.

Much of the work during the 2018 field season involved extensional drilling of the Zackly skarn, following the March 2018 initial inferred mineral resource estimate (MRE) of 3.4 million tonnes at 1.2% copper, 2 g/t gold and 14 g/t silver; the drilling has extended the 1,050 metres strike of the initial MRE by at least 850 metres, with the resource open along strike and at depth.
