Vonex beta testing Oper8tor platform to 'take complication out of communication'

Vonex Ltd (ASX:VN8) managing director & CEO Matt Fahey introduces Proactive Investors to the telecommunications tech company and its three pillars: direct to SME market Vonex-branded services; white-labelled wholesale solutions; and a research & development arm which is currently focused on beta testing an app called Oper8tor.

Fahey explains, "Oper8tor is a social media product and its a mobile phone application, predominantly. We will produce variants of it that work on the desktop as a piece of software. It's designed to be an application that takes the complication out of communication, either by voice or by message, for standard users - so it will appeal to mums and dads, but it will also appeal to businesses where they've got specific applications for things like conference calls. What it actually does underneath at the heart of the technology is it tears the walls down that have been created by all of the social media companies across the world."
