Spectur explores new markets in monitoring and warning systems as new MD takes the helm

Spectur Ltd's (ASX:SP3) new managing director Gerard Dyson tells Proactive Investors how the company is exploring new markets in monitoring and warning systems.

The MD, who was appointed this month, said the company was providing security monitoring systems to small business through to big name developers like Lendlease and Stockland as well as the Australian Government's Department of Defence.

The company is also looking at diversifying into new areas like shark, fire and tsunami warning systems.

Dyson said Spectur was pitched at number one in the market, "because it is offering the best that there is in the market in these lines of work, with a strong cash flow position, which is very pleasing".
