Coffee with Samso: Northern Minerals - A new wave of energy for the rare earth companies

I believe that the REE market has large gaps between investors that really understand the market and those that think they do.

I am very comfortable to say that I fall into the latter group as I have not invested in this sector before.

This episode of Coffee with Samso has George Bauk from Northern Minerals Ltd (ASX:NTU) talking to us about recent news on the REE market.

There has been a lot of news lately about US government discussions with Australian counter agencies regarding a realignment of priorities with the REE industry.

I do hear a lot recently that there is a demand for investing in REE companies.

As I have mentioned in the previous Coffee with Samso with George, most investors don't really know what this REE do.

Permanent magnets are the main story and there are still investors out there that realise the urgency to get into this business, but they are still unclear of the reasons.
